Two gals were out canoeing in Britain and chanced to be there with a video camera for one of natures' most strange and compelling dances - a murmuration of starlings, where they form a group mind and dance in a cloud at twilight. They shot a video .